Linux System Programming

&

UNIX Internals

1. Write a program which is used to add two numbers.
2. Write a program which accept name from command line argument and display it on screen.
3. Write a program which is used to display "Hello World" on screen and create its executable file.
4. Create makefile for above application and execute it using makefile.
5. Write a program which accept file name from user and open that file.
6. Write a program which accept file name from user and open that file and if file is not opened properly then display error message properly.
7. Write a program which accept file name and read first 5 characters from it.
8. Write a program which accept file name from user and read whole file.
9. Write a program which accept filename and string from user and write that string into file.